

FAMILY AND CONSUMER SCIENCES

College of Social Sciences and Interdisciplinary Studies

Department Description

The Department of Family and Consumer Sciences offers three distinct programs, two minors and one certificate. The focus of these programs is to enhance the skills and knowledge that will promote the well-being of individuals, families, and communities. Our programs and professions focus on individuals and families in order to achieve an optimum balance between people and their environments. The mission of Family and Consumer Sciences is to empower individuals and families to function interdependently in a global society.

Family and Consumer Science (Pre-Credential Single Subject Matter Program)

The major meets the California Career Technical Education (CTE) Curriculum Standards and Home Economics Teacher Preparation Standards of Quality and Effectiveness for Subject Matter Programs.

Graduates are prepared to enter a Single Subject Teaching Credential Program with a waiver of the California Subject Examinations for Teachers required to teach Family and Consumer Sciences/Home Economics in middle and high schools. Coursework includes Nutrition and Food, Fashion Merchandising & Management, Family Studies & Human Development, and others, combined with an internship in a middle or high school in the Sacramento area.

The Minor in Family and Consumer Sciences offers flexibility and breadth of courses across the disciplines of Family and Consumer Sciences including Food, Fashion, and Family. It is designed to complement any major for a broad understanding of human ecology. It also supplements any major in preparation for the California Subject Examinations for Teachers required for a teaching credential in Home Economics/Family and Consumer Sciences.

Family Studies and Human Development

The major prepares students for careers in various human service fields. The program emphasizes an asset-based approach to understanding lifespan human development, family systems and family diversity. The major is approved by the National Council on Family Relations (NCFR) for academic programs in Family Life Education. The major offers multiple courses required to meet the specifications set forth by the Association of Child Life Professionals (ACLP) for certification as a Certified Child Life Specialist (CCLS), including the child life course.

Certificate in Family Life Education

The goal of the certificate is to prepare students to provide family life education in a variety of settings such as schools, churches, youth programs, health care, and family service agencies. The certificate program is designed to cover the ten family life education content areas delineated by the National Council on Family Relations NCFR. The certificate is not a teaching credential. In conjunction with a Bachelor or Master degree or a state teaching credential, it may be helpful in obtaining employment as a Family Life Educator.

Fashion Merchandising and Management

The major prepares students for careers in the global fashion industry, including management, marketing, buying, advertisement, promotion, manufacturing, sourcing, distribution, retailing, and many more. The program also emphasizes the contemporary and historical ways of meeting the economic, physiological, aesthetic, psychological, sociological, and cultural needs of consumers relative to fashion products.

The program offers a vast array of courses that cover different areas of the fashion industry. Students learn the basics of fashion by taking foundation courses. Upper-division marketing classes allow students to become more familiar with the business side of fashion. Courses focusing on the basic design skills introduce students to the creative side of the industry. This program provides a well-rounded education that prepares students for jobs in any area of the fashion industry.

The Minor in Fashion Merchandising and Management provides students an understanding of the role fashion plays in social/cultural environment, business/economic environment, and natural environment. The minor is complementary to students pursuing careers in communication studies, psychology, journalism, marketing, entrepreneurship, management, business, art, and design.

Special Features

- Faculty in Family and Consumer Sciences come from diverse educational backgrounds and expertise. Faculty members promote and integrate a holistic approach to understanding individuals and families while preparing students for professional careers or graduate study.
- All programs in the department are committed to reflecting in our study and in our practices the diverse populations with which our students will work, including diversity in ability, age, educational level, ethnicity, gender identity, immigration status, nationality, race, religion, sexual orientation, and socioeconomic status.
- Students have access to laboratories and equipment to support hands-on application of concepts in textiles, design, apparel construction, and food. Support facilities include a Costume Collection gallery. Visit the virtual gallery at <http://www.csus.edu/facs/>.

- The Family Studies and Human Development program is approved by the National Council on Family Relations for academic programs in Family Life Education.
- The Pre-Credential Single Subject Matter program in FACS Education is approved for CSET (California Subject Examinations for Teachers) waiver by the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing.
- Service Learning courses (FASH 146, FSHD 162), Academic Internships (FACS 195A, FACS 195C, FSHD 195F), Education practica and other opportunities for Community Engaged Learning are a hallmark of our degree programs. These provide an opportunity for students to work under the supervision of a professional in business, education, government, or public service settings. Internships are planned a semester in advance with an adviser.
- The Department sponsors student organizations for students to participate in professional development and community service related to their major programs.
- In addition to serving majors and minors, the Department provides several general education courses for other majors including classes that meet the graduation requirements for the writing intensive, and race and ethnicity categories.
